

In times that value corporate power and the privileges of the rich over individual rights or the needs of the middle class and poor, like the late 19th century, and in our current political climate, it is all the more important to have a genuinely free press, in every way. A competitive media will help keep the airwaves open for genuine news and commentary.